

Measuring potential difference between points a and b.